17 PARTNERSHIP FOR THE GOALS

DEFINITIONS

Sustainability: Sustainability is generally defined as meeting our own needs without compromising the ability of future generations to meet theirs. It is essential to recognize that resources are limited. Furthermore, the long-term consequences of how resources are utilized must be carefully considered.

Sustainability Management System: In general, a sustainability management system is used to identify risks, outline relevant management practices, and monitor and document performance related to environmental, social, cultural, economic, quality, human rights, health, and safety issues.

Sustainable Tourism: It is defined as a tourism approach that seeks to minimize adverse impacts on society and the environment, while enhancing the local economy, safeguarding natural and cultural heritage, and improving the overall quality of life for both local communities and visitors.

The tourism industry seeks to enhance and sustain the quality of both natural and human resources over the long term, by reducing tensions and conflicts arising from the interactions among visitors, the environment, and host communities.

Our goal is to enhance visitor satisfaction by sustaining progress in regions where tourism is developing.

The main objectives of sustainable tourism include: ensuring the proper use of environmental resources that play a significant role in the development of tourism; maintaining economic balance, natural heritage, and biodiversity; respecting the socio-cultural structure of host communities; promoting tolerance between cultures; preserving cultural heritage and traditional values; contributing to the improvement of the quality of life of local people and visitors; achieving gains in terms of social services; and reducing poverty by creating income opportunities.

What are the principles of sustainable tourism?

Economic sustainability: Ensuring that tourism enterprises can continue to grow and remain competitive in order to provide long-term benefits.

Local development: Enhancing the contribution of tourism to the host destination by supporting activities that increase visitors' spending locally.

Employment quality: Supporting professional specialization, improving wages and service quality, and increasing both the quantity and quality of tourism-generated employment, while ensuring non-discrimination based on race, gender, disability, or other factors.

Social participation and gender equality: Ensuring that the benefits of tourism, both economically and socially, are distributed fairly across the community.

Visitor satisfaction: Providing visitors with a safe, fulfilling, sustainable, and innovative experience without discrimination based on race, gender, disability, age, or any other factor.

Local control: Ensuring that local authorities are in consultation with other tourism stakeholders during planning, management, and implementation processes; involving them in relevant stages of tourism development to enhance their authority.

Community well-being: Ensuring that local residents have access to social structures, services, and life support systems without causing social disruption or exploitation, thereby maintaining and improving their quality of life.

Cultural richness: Respecting and preserving the culture, traditions, distinctive features, and historical heritage of host communities while enhancing their value.

Physical integrity: Preserving and improving the quality of urban and rural areas, while preventing physical and visual deterioration of these spaces.

Biodiversity: Supporting the protection of natural areas, habitats, wildlife, and species, while minimizing potential harm.

Efficient use of resources: Minimizing the use of limited and non-renewable resources in the development and operation of tourism facilities and services.

Environmental impact: Minimizing air, water, and land pollution as well as waste generation from tourism businesses and visitors; promoting the concepts of “responsible business” and “responsible tourist” by educating local residents, employees, and visitors about environmental impact.
